KENTUCKY.—The Legislature of this State met at Franklert on Monday the 7th instant. The Lieutenant Governor took the Chair of the Senate, and George Robertson (formely in Congress) was chosen to preside in the House of Representatives. In the Message of the Governor, is an exposition of the views one party it the Government of that State, at the head of whom is its Chief Magistrate. On of whom is its Chief Magistrate. On the day following the delivery of that communication, the House of Representatives, appearing to consider a prompt expression of its views on the principal topic of that Message necessary, passed the following resolve, 60 to

"Resolved, That so much of the Governor's Message as plates to the Judi-cary be referred to the Committee on Courts of Justice. With permission to port by bill or otherwise; and for the ter enabling said Committee to disge their duty, so far as relates to ourt of Appeals, resolved, further, that it is the deliberate and solpinion of this House, and of a large majority of the good people of this Commonwealth, herein represen-ted, that the act entitled, "An act to repeal the law organizing the Court of Appeals, and re-organizing a Court of Appeals," is unconstitutional and void, so far as it purports to repeal or abolish the Court of Appeals, and erect and establish a other Court in its stead; and that the Court of Appeals, so attempted to be repealed and abolished, having been created by the Constitution, is (the said act notwithstanding) the Supreme Count of this State, and the Judges thereof, having neither resigned or been removed from office by either of the modes recognized and provided by the Constitution, are still in office, and should be so considered and respected by all the functionaries of the Government."

The Governor and House of Representatives are directly at joints, with this advantage on the side of the latter; that they are fresh from their constituents, and may be supposed truly to represent the will of the People. The majority of the Senate, on the other majority of the Senate, on the other hand, are said to be on the side of the Governor. We shall soon see. It is, perhaps, fortunate that, in this State, the Governor has not the power of butting his veto upon bills—or, judging from the determined language of his Message, should the Senate accord with he other House, civil war and bloodshed would appear to be inevitable.

When the nurse returned to her dwelling, she applied her breast to it. "I want nothing." said this extraordinary child. "I am quite filled with the grace of God!" The nurse fainted. GENERAL LAFAYETTE.

Account of a breakfast given by Mr Beasley, the American consul at Ha vre, to Gen. Lafayette, on the morn ng after the landing of the veteran. -We have no doubt it will be perused with much interest by our readers ge-

Havre, October 6. General Lafavette has this morning left us for Paris. He was received here with every demonstration of attach ment a respect, but without confusi-on or of any kind. Madame Geo. Lafayer and her amiable family have been in Havre for some days awaiting his arrival, and as soon as the Brandy wine was at anchor, they went on board in a steam vessel to receive him. They immediately returned together, and the party were elegantly entertained at the ouse of M. de la Roche. Here the veteran received the congratulations of his friends, and appeared in the highest health and spirits. This morning a most sumptuous breakfast was given by Mr. Beasley, the American consul, at which the General, his family and suite, Com. Morris, commander of the Brandywine, and about 50 other persons were present. Nothing could exceed the elegant arrangement of this entertainment. The residence of the American consul is nearly on the top of the coast, with a garden commanding a view of the town, the mouth of the seine, its opposite bank, and the sea in the distantion In this garden, a tent, ornament with the flags of France and America, was pitched in such a manner as to indulge the whole company with this magnificent view .-The banquet was most splendid, and the animated and graceful cheerfulness of the amiable veteran, who was the object of it, communicated an air of gaiety and enjoyment to the whole party.-As soon as the entertainment concluded, the General and his party set off to Paris. A guard of honour consisting of many gentlemen of the town, mounted on horseback, awaited their carriages a mile out of the town, and attended them to Harfleur.
(At Rouen the General was welcomed with enthusiasm by the people; but the military charged upon them and killed and wounded several.)
